

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. I don't understand why they can air such a partisan program like "Stolen Honor" under those circumstances.

Can't the FCC exert control over the airing of such a program? It's important that we see programs that give a balanced look at the presidential candidates, particularly if Sinclair's use of the airwaves is paid for by public taxes.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
